The terrain is flat in the area, rising to the north-east towards the road. There are plenty of trees in the area that create a pleasant environment to the southeast of the building and have the potential to relax and relax for visitors. Structural constructions in terms of statics do not show major damage, cracks and other damage in bearing walls. Overall, however, the equipment, the suitability of the premises for functional use, the window and door panels and the energy performance of the building predetermine the property to be completely renovated. The renovation of the currently inactive, locally protected Dornyai tourist hostel. Dornyai Tourist House is a prominent place in the city's historical heritage, one of the few architectural monuments that has become a symbol of many historical ages. The eighty-year-old building was currently unused, formerly used as a hostel and a shelter. Eresztvény is the old hiking area of the city. Here is the ruins of Dornyai Tourist House, north of Salgó, at the end of the driveway from the Eresztvény, near the ski slopes. On October 20, 1935, the building designed by Sándor Ágoston was inaugurated by the Salgótarján Department of the Hungarian Carpathian Association. Old photos from the second half of the 1930s show that there was significant social activity in the area. The Dornyai House was popular not only with guests coming from further afield, but also with the Salgotarians. Salgó Shelter took the name Dornyai Tourist House in 1965, paying tribute to Béla Dornyai, a prominent educator in the city. After that, for twenty years, the house was a popular destination, or the starting point for hikes in the vicinity, the ski resort was in operation and there was an elevator. The hostel was still in operation in the first half of the 1990s, and there were attempts to maintain it. Around this time, mainly Soviet and Polish tourist groups were missing. As a result, the operation became more and more difficult, and the ski slope was closed, which could be moved, it was moved here.
